DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (if known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

A two-stories building of brick construction, wall bearing, set on a concrete foundation; a covered balcony on three sides and partially on the fourth side; of wood frame construction (balcony).

The building has the same appearance now (1971) and when it was first (1890) constructed, except an annex was added in 1901. It is probably a quasi-public building and has been maintained until the present time in a useable condition; present condition is good.

It is proposed by the County Chamber of Commerce Civic & Cultural Committee, Jackson, California, to preserve the architectural integrity of the building; to remodel the interior space for such purposes as county offices and public meetings.

The "Old County Hospital" is representative of Early American style of architecture with some indication of Spanish influence--a California eclectic form of architecture. It is one of the few remaining buildings of this architectural styling in the Mother Lode area; thus, the architectural styling of the building is in conformity with the earlier period of Amador County, and, at a time, when the Mother Lode area was beginning to develop its facilities, at a greater pace, to meet the requirements of a ever-increasing population.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The historical significance of this building derives from the fact it represents a stage in the cultural setting of Amador County, wherein the "Old County Hospital" was there to alleviate the sufferings of the indigent sick on a county-wide basis.

A preliminary examination of County Records indicates the "Old Hospital Building", or rather the main part of the structure was completed in 1890; hence, the main structure is 81 years old (1971). Apparently, this building was the third county hospital--a private home was used when the county was formed in 1854; the second hospital was built in 1860.

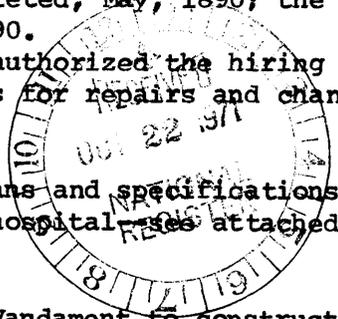

The Amador County Board of Supervisors advertised for plans and specifications for a new building, May 2, 1887. Plans and specifications were prepared by Contractor C. W. Swain, and others. Swain's plans and specifications were accepted and bids were made for a construction contract; however, the contract for constructing the hospital building was not signed until April 2, 1888, due to a controversy pertaining to the location of the county seat within Amador County. One contract went to C. W. Swain to construct the main building; another contract was awarded to C. E. Fournier to construct the kitchen and dining room addition. The kitchen and dining room was completed, May, 1890; the main building (hospital) was completed July, 1890.

March 25, 1901: the Board of Supervisors authorized the hiring of an architect to prepare plans and specifications for repairs and changes to the county hospital.

April 1, 1901: Mr. H. E. Kay presented plans and specifications for the construction of an annex to the county hospital. See attached sketch of the floor plans (shaded area).

May 6, 1901: contract awarded to Lincoln Vandament to construct new building (annex) at the county hospital. William Bristow was appointed superintendent for construction of the annex.

November 4, 1901: the new annex was completed.
